In Marking Time, Paul Rabinow presents his most recent reflections on the anthropology of the contemporary. Drawing richly on the work of Michel Foucault, John Dewey, Niklas Luhmann, and, most interestingly, German painter Gerhard Richter, Rabinow offers a set of conceptual tools for scholars examining cutting-edge practices in the life sciences, security, new media and art practices, and other emergent phenomena.

Marking Time explores some of the dimensions of what that practice entails. This book continues work already accomplished in Anthropos Today: Reflections on Modern Equipment devoted to the formation of concepts useful for an anthropology of the contemporary.¹ The book is itself a punctual intervention marked, as it were, by a particular set of circumstances although its ambitions are of a more general kind.
